Palliative care is an approach that improves the quality of life of patients and their families facing problem associated with life threatening illness, through the prevention and relief of suffering by means of early identification and impeccable assessment and treatment of pain and other problems, physical , psychosocial and spiritual. Effectieve palliative care requires a broad multidisciplinary approach that includes the family and makes use of available community resources. It can be sucessfully implemented even if resources are limited. Spirituality is a fundamental component of palliative care. According to the Clinical Practice Guidelines for Quality Palliative Care, spirituality is a "dynamic and intrinsic aspect of humanity..." and has been associated with "an improved quality of life for those with chronic and serious illness..."

Event: School bus project

Mobility is something that most of us take for granted. Moving from one location to another is what we do independently and without much thought. This is not the case for people afflicted with polio or cerebral palsy or those who met with accidents or falls. Without a wheel chair these individuals must rely on their friends and families for transportation or resort to crawling. With this in mind, the volunteers of the unit have taken their effort a step forward. They are now busy gifting wheel chairs for those who are unable to walk and are confined to their beds. The unit purchases the wheel chairs, which cost Rs. 5000/. Each, and transport them to the residence of the patients. This has increased the recipients mobility, employability and independence. A total of thirteen wheelchairs have been distributed so far. The unit uses every rupee donated to help those in need without regard to race or religion.

Kochi: A 19-year-old girl was bought back to life through an advanced stem cell surgery that successfully cured her of leukaemia.

The stem cells were provided by Abin Saji, an Electronics and Instrumentation student at the KMEA Engineering College.

Abin had participated in the stem cell donation camp conducted by the college authorities, in association with Dathri, a Bangalore-based organisation that promotes stem cell donation.

The girl, who had registered her name with Dathri, found Abin's stem cell sample matching with hers.

Abin Saji Akshay

Only one in 10,000 people would have their stem cells matching with that of another person. Abin accepted the request right away, and the stem cell donation was carried out at the Amrita Institute of Medical Sciences (AIMS) in the presence of his parents and relatives.

Both the stem cell donation and the surgery were performed by AIMS clinical oncology department head Dr Neeraj Siddarth.

A few months ago, Akshay Krishnan, a student of the same college and a classmate of Abin, had donated his stem cells to a 29-year-old native of Bangalore. Akshay, a resident of Eramalloor in Alappuzha, is the youngest stem cell donor in the State.

The organisers of the stem cell donation camp are happy for being an inspiration to others.

Stem Cell Donation Picking up Pace in Kerala

by Shalet Jimmy

Kochi: The frantic efforts by the family of Nalini Ambadi, a Malayali psychologist based in the U.S., to find matching stem cell might still be afresh in the minds of many. But, pushing those days of reluctance behind, the State has taken a positive detour. With 11,139 people registering to donate bone marrow/stem cell, Kerala has come second among the states of the country with the maximum number of registered donors, right behind Gujrat with 11,626 donors. Interestingly, it is the youth in the 20-30 age group who are coming forward for donation.

Data available with the Datri Bone Marrow Registry shows that 15 transplantations have been performed in Kerala, whereas in Gujrat, which has the highest number of registered donors, only nine transplantations have been performed.

"Altogether, 82 transplantations have been performed in the country. Chances of getting a donor with matching stem cell is very low. The real work starts when a match takes place," pointed out Datri CEO and co-founder Raghu Rajagopal.

"Every registration and transplantation is the result of constant counselling. It is hard to find matches in the 'donated bone marrow'. But, once it matches, the counselling starts. We take every donor as an example, and conduct intense campaigns to show that the donors would remain healthy even after donating stem cell. When the donors themselves talk about it, people believe," the official pointed out.

Aby Sam John, the first donor from Kerala and the Datri donor drive coordinator, said that fear grips many when it comes to transplantation. "But, it is changing, and that's why the youth are coming forward for transplantation."

In the case of Nalini Ambadi, a global campaign was launched, and 13 potential donors were identified. But, none of them was willing for transplantation. Nalini died in 2013. Recently, three students of the KMEA Engineering College, Edathala, saved three lives by donating stem cell. Ajmal Rahman, one of the students, said that the college had launched a campaign to find matching stem cells for a boy named Sachin Siju.

"Around 1,800 students had registered. The campaign was organised by Datri, and we gave them samples. Unfortunately, the boy died one-and-half month ago. A few days ago, I got a call saying that my samples matched with that of an Ahmedbad-native. The transplantation procedure was simple. Now, it's been a week since it was performed, and I am fully healthy. I started playing football just after a week," he said.

Bone marrow transplantation takes place with strict adherence to the norms set by the Bone Marrow Donors Worldwide (BMDW), which includes 18 months of confidentiality for donors and recipients. Sibin T R, another donor, said that he was willing to donate bone marrow again.

Report on KMEA NSS Pain & Palliatuve Care Unit

First-ever College Unit Sets an Example in Palliative Care

by Shalet Jimmy

Kochi: While the country is slowly waking up to the concept of 'palliative care', the students of KMEA Engineering College, Edathala, have gone miles ahead with setting up an organised unit to take care of the terminally-ill patients.

According to the field experts, the effort is highly laudable as other states are yet to have full-fledged units, barring a few metros.

The students' palliative care unit will have an ambulance of its own. It's a first of the sort venture, not only in the state but in the whole country.

A couple of years ago, when a few of the NSS volunteers at the KMEA Engineering College decided to take training in first aid and resuscitation techniques to help their own students, little did they know they would soon be ushered into an untrodden path.

"Now, with almost 100 volunteers, the unit is going to be launched in the middle of January. The volunteers, including 10 teaching and non-teaching staff, have already been trained by professionals, with the backing of IMA," said Sabith Ummer, assistant professor, Mechanical department of the college.

Though the unit is yet to make an official launch, the students and staff have already started carrying out activities.

"With the help of a survey done by 'Thanal', a palliative care society, we have identified patients living near our college. Now, we are going to extend the survey into the whole panchayat," said Sabith Ummer.

A KMEA Engineering College teacher and member of the college palliative care unit talking to a terminally-ill patient

The volunteers are set to visit the patients once a week and provide assistance in medication and dressing of wounds.

The volunteers have, however, been split into 10 groups with a team leader, assisted by a staff from the college. As part of their work, two male and two female volunteers from the team accompanied by a staff will frequent the patients in their houses once a week.

"Students from all branches are included in the team. They could then find more people in need of the care, especially from their areas. They will not, however, lose attendance on those days," said Adv KA Jaleel, secretary of the college.

For Kulsoodh KA, a volunteer and a final year electronics and communication student, it is an eye-opener. "It has given us a different perspective, which, otherwise, we wouldn't ever have," said Kulsoodh. When boys helped the patients in difficult tasks such as changing the water beds etc., we girls tried to strike a conversation with the patients, she said.

Dr G Mohan, medical officer, Department of Palliative Care, Ernakulam General hospital, called it a noble act, and said that they have been trying to pass on this message to the students who have been visiting them.

According to Dr Shakti Prasad, chief physiotherapist, Alpha Pain Clinic, the message would spread through the students. "They could convey the message to their juniors to continue their efforts. They could convey to their parents as well," he said, adding that such efforts should be lauded as many are yet to grasp the true meaning of palliative care.

The college is also planning to have a tie up with medical shops to distribute free medicines to the needy, said Nikhil, the college secre-
